"For the first time in a long I felt proud of something I was making. That sense of accomplishment from fixing my code to work properly and completing small tasks throughout development one by one was addictive."

ABOUT

Entry-level web developer looking to gain experience working within a team environment and grow my skills along with a company. I've developed a wide range of web applications through freelance work and side projects and I always strive to follow best practices to produce clean, responsive solutions. As a largely self-taught developer, I have a drive for learning new technologies constantly and contributing to open source software.
